As therapists, we use voice (ours and our clients) as part of the therapeutic process. When we are not aware of our own voice, we can undermine our intention, When we are not aware of our clients' voices, we may miss important cues. Through lecture, practicum, and case study, this training will attune you to ways in which voice informs and helps guide effective practice. You will 1) build awareness of qualities of voice; 2) learn to use vocal cues to track a client; 3) use voice as a tool to help your client shift states; 4) enhance your capacity to join, support, and, when appropriate, interrupt your clients; and 5) extend your facility in designing and fine-tuning therapeutic experiments. This workshop is also open to doctors, nurses, teachers and other interactive and wellness practitioners and trainees. Tuition $60 (5 CEUs)
